his injured feelings. He began by saying that he had no statement to make. Then he made one.

"I shall see that no singer of discredit is pointed to any act of mine in this matter," he said. "I don't intend to be made a criminal of when I have acted perfectly within my rights and only after the most careful investigation of the customs regulations on my part.

part.
"Plead guilty? No, sir! I don't in-tend to plead guilty to anything."
This was before he knew just where he stood in the eyes of the customs people.

"I think the vigilance of the customs inspectors is greater than necessary; at least, it is greater than their discretion. Don't mistake me. I do not believe that any purpose exists to do me wrong. But I think that the customs people have done me a great injustice in thus giving publicity to this matter before a thorough investigation could bring out the real truth of the case."

Mr. Stuart then told how he had obtaned a copy of the customs regulations bearing on the case of non-residents through the American Express Company's office there, and how, to be doubly sure in the matter, he had ob-

'If there has been any change in the regulations concerning non-residents," said he, "the consulate at Paris would seem to have been the logical place to advise me of such change. As it is, I am entirely innocent of intent to defraud the government, and I have already offered to pay all the customs huttes necessary. Mr. Stuart and his wife went up to the public stores building late in the afternoon, and Mrs. Stuart began the work of going through her trunks, but the hour was so late that the task could not be finished this afternoon,

Only Misapprehension.

"There is no question in this matter" said Deputy Surveyor Smythe, after the departure of Mr. Stuart. "Mr. said Deputy Surveyor Snythe, after the departure of Mr. Stuart. "Mr. Stuart, being a resident, makes his family residents also and he labored under a misapprehension when he believed that Mrs. Stuart came under the non-resident head. I cannot understand how it was that the purser of the Mauretania did not have a copy of the new regulations bearing on the question of non-residents."

It was the change of a clause in the customs regulations, effected by Treasury Department regulation 39327, published February 4, 1910, which brought the traveler from Virginia into such low regard for the method of taxing native sea-goers. Under the previous regulations, made under section 703 of the tariff law, the Treasury Department promulgated a ruling on August that the sea which allowed non-

The regulations as amended give foreigners the same privilege of bringing in wearing apparel, articles of personal adornment, etc., without regard to the $100 limit, but stipulate that "citizens of the United States may have this privilege previded it is shown to the satisfaction of the collector's representative on the pier, subject to the states and to request him to run for the office. "Audrey" Next Week.

The Benjamin Players in "Merely Mary Ann." will be seen again to-day, matinee and night, at the Academy where this excellent offering of the stock company has been drawing large houses all the week. Miss Catherine Carter in the title role is more charming than ever, and her characterization of the slavey in the London boarding house is all that could be desired. Franklin Ritchie is seen to advantage. He seach and every member of the company is. Mr. Schnell does some excellent work in the bit of a part of the intoxicated boarder, and Miss Beatrice Moss, as Rittve Triputing sexcellent.

Miss Mary Johnston's cigantic dramatic production, "Audrey," will be the offering of the first time that "Audirey" has ever been attempted by a stock company, because of the great expense attendant upon its production. However, Mr. Benjamin has declared that no excense shall be spared in making next week's performances of this tremendous production spectacular as to staging and costuming.

CHARGE BEVERLEY WITH MURDER OF BROOKS

The coroner's finquest vesterday into The coroner's finquest yesterday into the death of Daniel Brooks, who was shot two weeks ago by Harrison Beverley, and who died early Thursday morning, brought in a verdict that he came to his death as the result of wounds inflicted by Beverley. Beverley made his escape after the shooting and has not been caught.

The shooting occurred at Thirtieth and P Streets two weeks ago as the result of a quarrel over a trivial matter. Brooks was shot in the abdomen, and peritonitis set in, which brought his death. He died in the City Home Thursday morning.

DEATHS

SUTTON—Toe fair for the adernment of man's habitation, God in His alliwise wisdom took from us on May the 25th, 1509 (one year ago), the beautiful and much beloyed ANNA MILLS SUTTON, who was the fond and devoted wife of O. M. Sutton of Manteo, Va., to grace the celestial palace, and although the vacancy created by her death can never be fully replaced. Yet the thought of her sweet pure, earthy life was in strict accord with the Divine ruling, and therefore great must have been the rejoicing of Heaven when her angelic flight was heralded. Although the torn and bleeding hearts of those who knew her (for to know her was to love her) will continue to throb with a pulsation of deep sadness and freparable loss, no higher tribute can be paid her, nor can there be found a more appropriate one than, "She answered her summons as she had altways lived, a loving wife and mother, who was richly endowed with every gift essential for the completion of God's masterpiece, a perfect woman."

Rebuilding the University College of Medicine

Three Decades

Twenty years ago a full-fledged doctor was made out of a raw youth in one short session of six months. His education consisted of lectures and a few chemical demonstrations and dissections of the cadaver; then he was turned loose to practice on you,

Ten years ago the length of this course had increased to three years of more or less systematized lectures. Microscopical and chemical laboratories had been established. He was required to witness operations in the amphitheatre, and, on receiving his diploma, to pass the State Board of Medical Examiners before he could receive a license to practice on you.

To-day he must have twelve years of preliminary training before entering a medical school. He must labor four years in the classroom, in the laboratories and by the bedside of the sick, the final or fourth year being devoted almost entirely to diagnosing disease in-the laboratory and at the bedside. As vivid as the contrast of the past two decades is with the present, the next ten-mile post should see us looking back upon a decade of equal or greater progress. The way is longer, the hill steeper, the cost in time, labor and money far, far greater. Have you time or labor to give? If not, help with money, that the time and labor of others may be secured to build and equip the big new UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF MEDI-CINE that is to turn out the doctor of the next decade who is to practice on you.
